

Hashinger Hall “Bound to Broadway”

The dream of being a Broadway actor: The lights, the glitter, the applause; few could claim they never wished for such an opportunity. But there isn't enough room on the stage for everyone. Some must seek their glamour backstage performing through the manipulation of the physical theatre.

Performers on both sides must give their all to make a good show. But we all have times when we seek different forms of expression. Such is the case with the crew of Hashinger Hall's show.

Finding discontentment with their role in the performance, they hand the entire show over to the actors themselves. All soon realize, however, how important person is in creating art on the stage. The crew resumes their duties appreciating their position in the theatre and delighting in the opportunity to be “Bound to Broadway.”
